Progress through growth

Growth is indicative of life, and change is an integral part of growth, and progress necessitates change; therefore man is never content to stand still. In the area of education, as much as in any other part of life, one is aware of change. The student of the 1970 world needs a unique type of education to prepare him to take his place in the rapidly changing world. Mechanicsburg High School offers such an education.

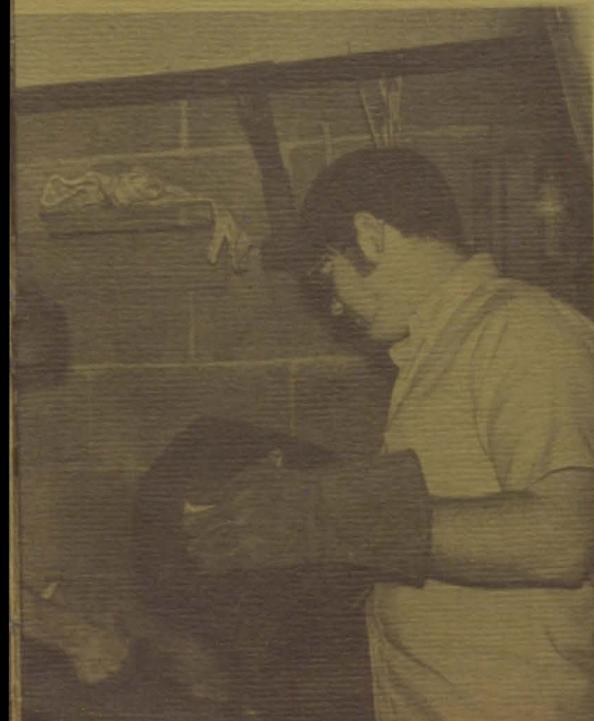

responsibility of leadership

There are many levels of leadership which effect our lives daily. The principal exercises his authority by interpreting state school laws, board policies, and by making and carrying out school rules. The teachers aid the principal by insuring that we know, understand, and abide by these rules. They also lead us daily in comprehending and absorbing the knowledge that is offered to us. The student leaders provide us the needed link between faculty and students. They express our opinions and lead us to make decisions for the betterment of the school as a whole.

But let us not forget the responsibility of leadership that lies on the shoulders of each of us. We are obligated by our position as students to lead ourselves and others along the paths of honesty, loyalty, morality, good sportsmanship, and good citizenship.

Sometimes in the daily rush of homework, book reports and tests, we are inclined to forget one of the most important aspects of life--our health. The increased emphasis on detailed study, the wider range of subject matter and space-age technology have combined to make us feel the pressure of time. Today's appeal for physical fitness and sports is a much needed one. M.H.S. has always had an excellent sports program and their records prove it.

willingness to try new things

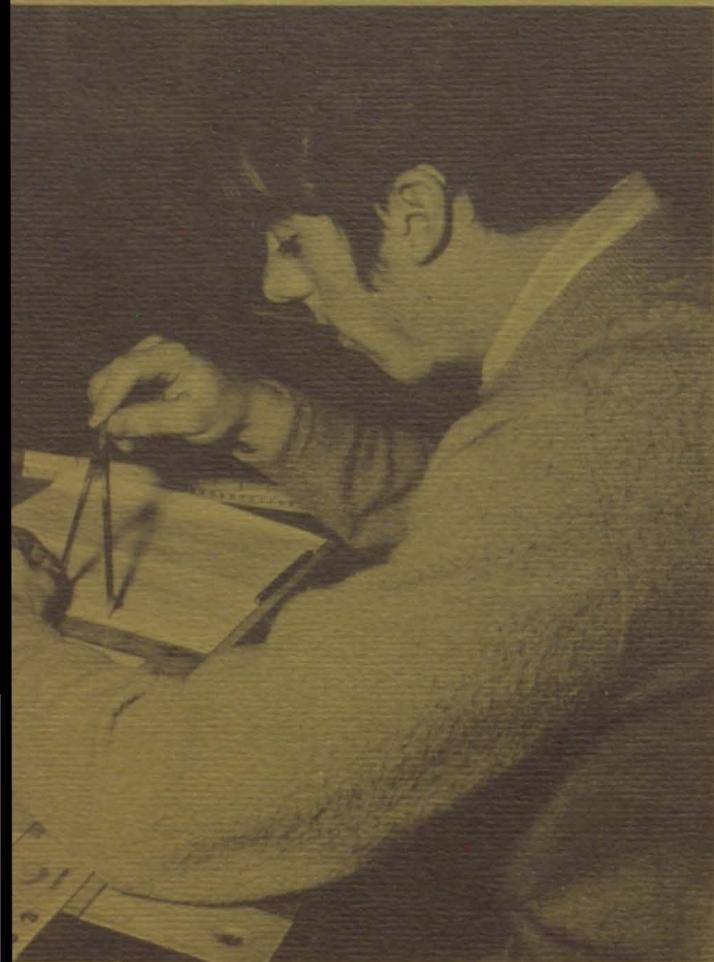

As American teenagers we try new things constantly--new hairdos, new clothes fads, and new foods. We use a strange word once, and if it sounds "groovy" or "tough" it immediately becomes a part of our vocabulary. We must retain this spirit of eagerness about the new experiences we encounter at Mechanicsburg High School. Whatever the new experience may be, we must participate in it with interest and enthusiasm and accept it as an integral part of our school life.

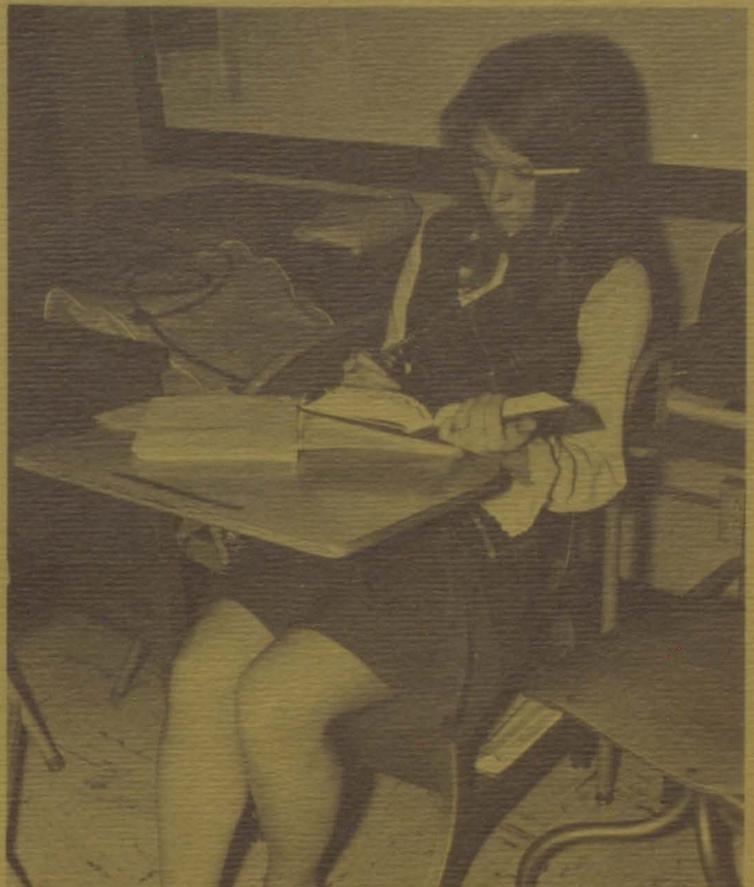

importance of scholastic accomplishment

The sounds of scholastic accomplishments come from the halls. The pounding of typewriter keys, E-flats coming from the bass section, the silent movement of a microscope being focused, the swish of a brush on an easel. Tests are given to seniors to see how much knowledge has been accumulated through the years.

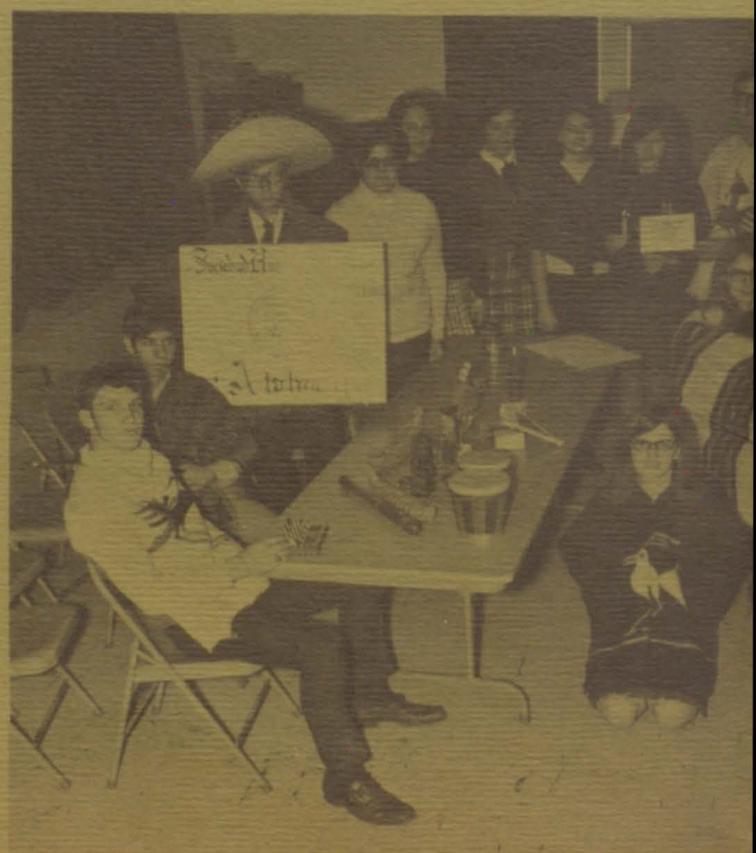

Seniors, sensing that graduation is more than just the end of another year, ponder over questions only the future can answer. As we look back at the school year, we are reminded that clubs and social events will soon be only pleasant memories, but the records of our scholastic accomplishments will go with us through the years.

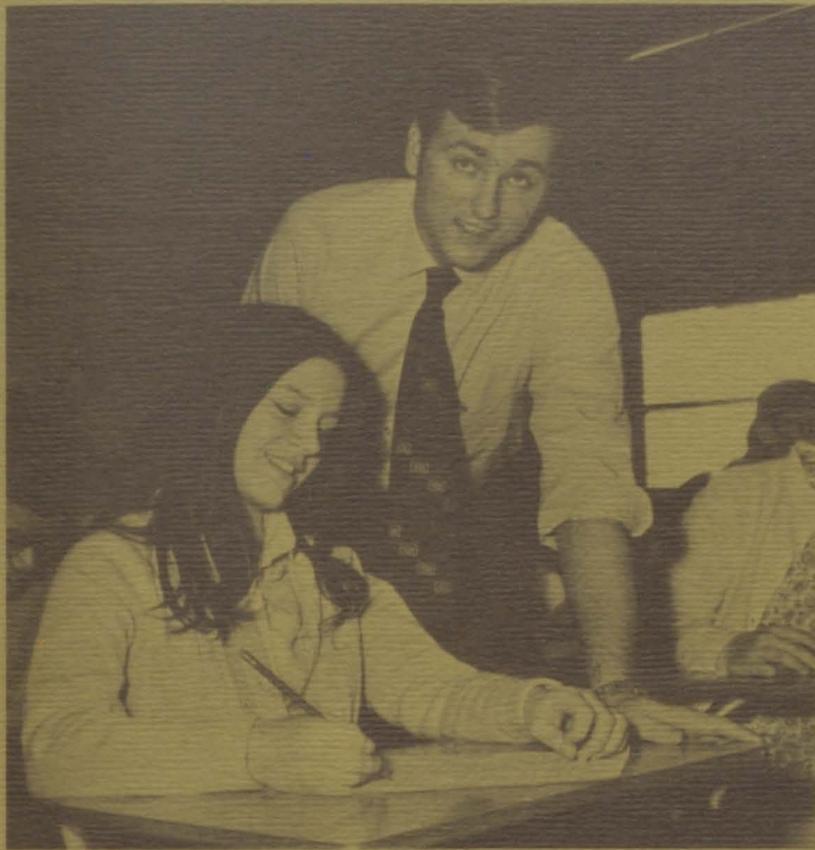

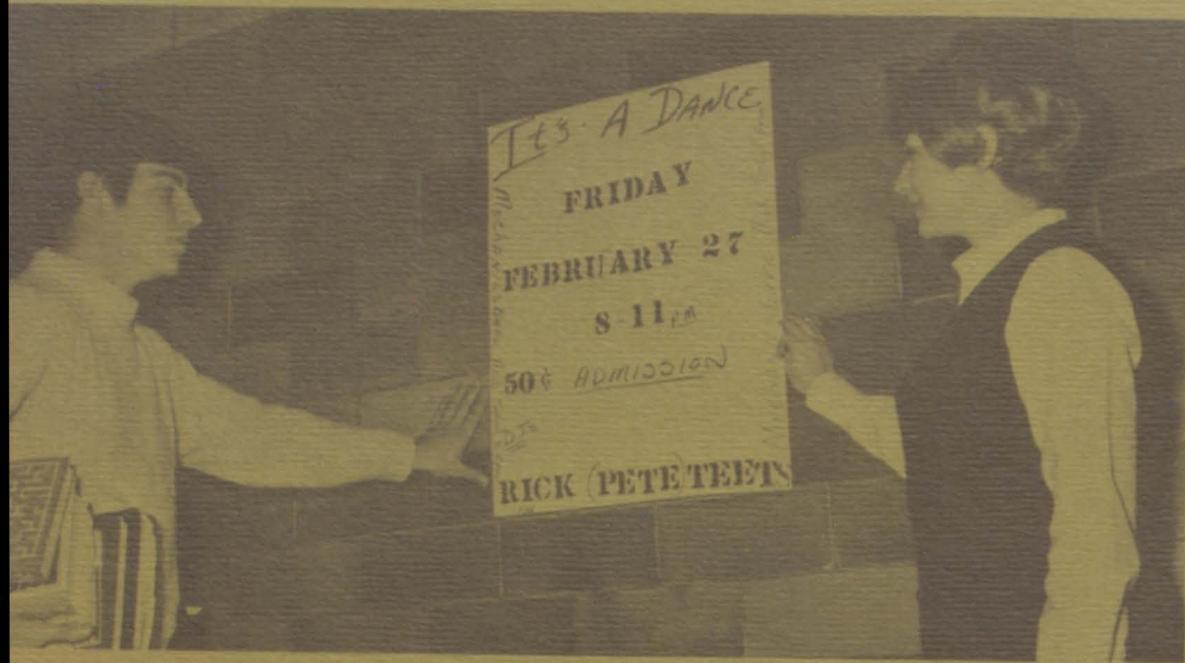

challenge of a varied curriculum . . .

Through the combined efforts of parents and teachers we are given the opportunity to educate and develop our minds. We must learn to accept the challenges of a varied curriculum and better ourselves by facing them with an open mind and an eager spirit. As we absorb the knowledge that is offered to us, we must realize that men have lived and died so that the questions of young Americans can be answered by those whose questions have been answered by others. We must accept the challenges of this varied curriculum and educate ourselves as fully as possible, so that we can answer the questions of the next generation of inquisitive students.

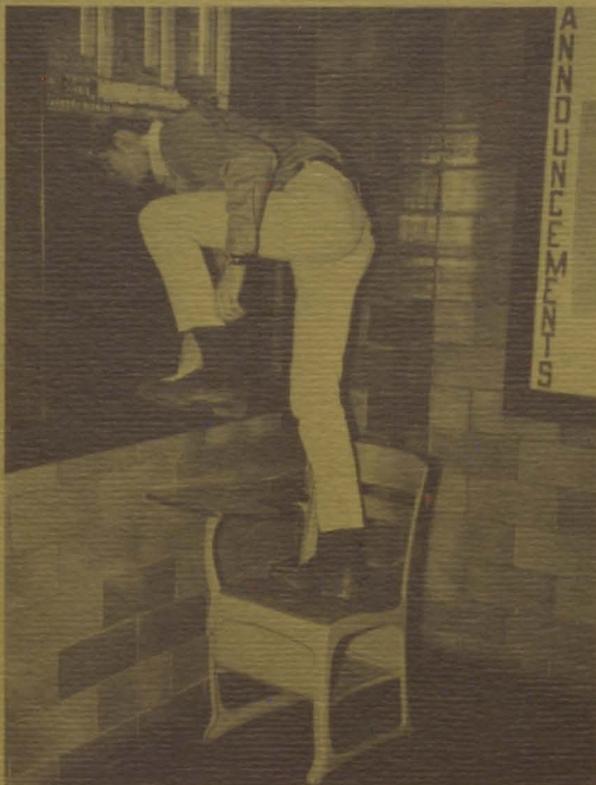

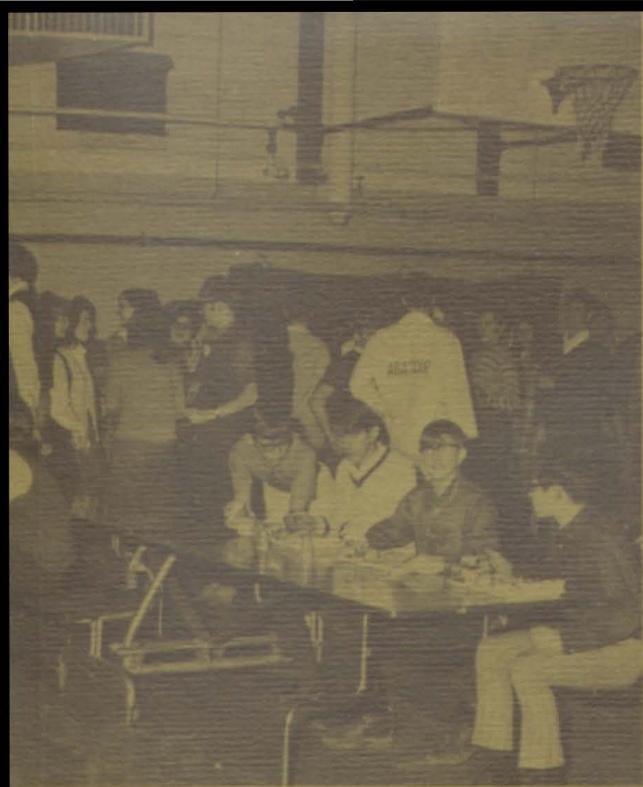

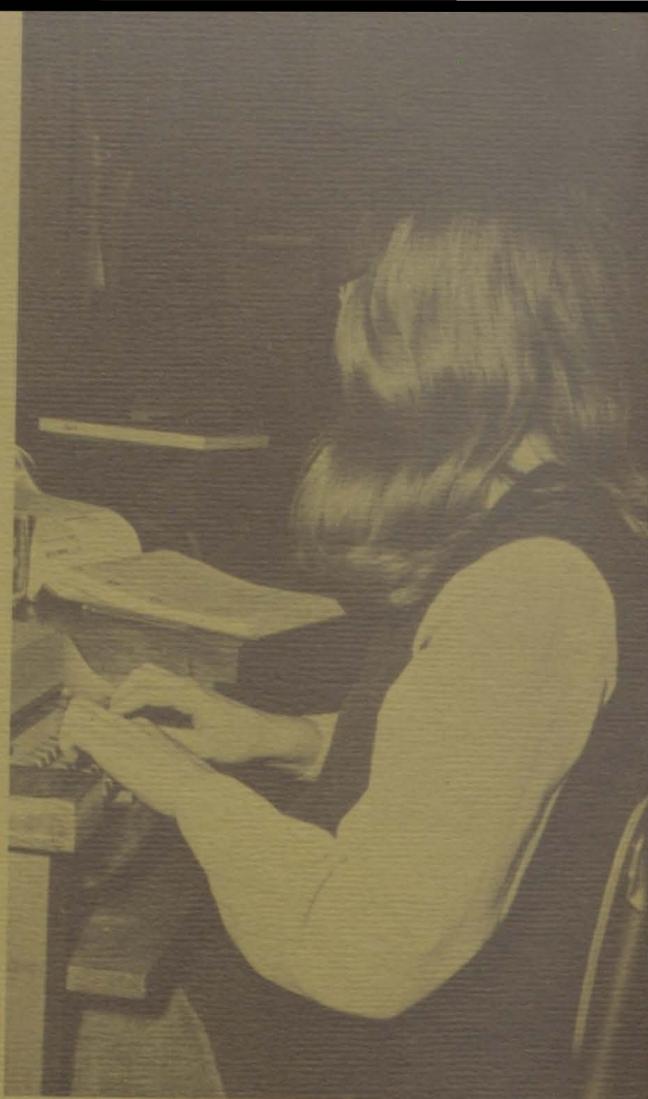

toward social maturity

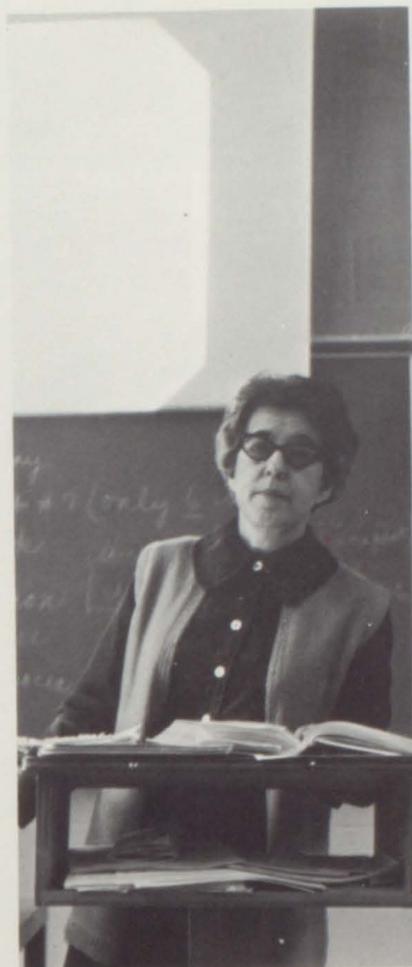

As high school students we show our progress in many ways. Our social maturity must be revealed in the way we act with others our own age, and with those older and wiser than we. It must also be revealed in our acceptance of civic duties, moral responsibilities, and social opportunities.

progress through growth

It is felt that the Mechanicsburg School System has provided a well-rounded program of academic subjects, a variety of opportunities in extra-curricular activities, an introduction to all phases of Arts and Sciences, and a sturdy foundation on which to build a career.
